EQUITABLE BUILDING IN RUINS

Billion Dollars' Worth of Securities Stored in Steel Vaults Are Supposed to Be Safe—Money Loss
Will Not Exceed $1,000,000, as Structure Was of Antiquated Type
and Was Soon to Have Been Razed.
Bank President Injured.New York, Jan. 10.—Fire completely ruined the building of the Equitable Assurance society—the exclusive office building in New York. Six men lost their lives in the wreckage, one being Battalion Chief William Walsh of the fire department, who was carried down
by a collapsing floor as he was leading his men upward toward the lawyers' club rooms. Three employees of the cafe Savarin, who were trapped on the roof, plunged to death
when the flames reached them. William Giblin, president of the Mercantile Safe Deposit company, was saved
in the nick of time—dragged through a window whose bars had been saved through by firemen.The actual money loss was comparatively slight, provided, that is,
that the securities were not charred or injured in the steel vaults. Even the Equitable people do not mourn
the building. They were going to tear it down soon anyway, and figured its actual value to the stock
and policy holders as precisely nothing. It was outworn and antiquated and the cost of demolishing it would have been far more than the loss in furnishings and equipment. Figuring that way, the society places its loss at only $250,000, but the value of the law library is not included in the estimate. Insurance experts guessed that the loss to tenants would amount to perhaps $400,000. So all told the loss was perhaps $1,000,000.Invaluable Records Lost.
Invaluable records of the Equitable society of railroad companies and of corporations and law firms, housed in the building, were destroyed. Securities valued at upwards of $1,000,- 000 were endangered, although they are probably safe in the massive steel vaults now sheathed in ice. The fine law library, containing 35,000 volumes, worth perhaps $500,- 000, is dissipated in ashes. Possibly 100,000 life insurance policies upon which the Equitable had loaned money were burned. If they are gone it will take legislation to retrace them. All in all, the fire so tangled the affairs of corporations with vast interests that it may take years to straighten them out.Richeson
Is SentencedBoston, Jan. 10.—Death in the electoral chair some time during the week
beginning May 19, will be the punishment of the Rev. Clarence V. T.
Richeson for the treacherous murder
of Miss Avis Linnell on Oct. 14 last,
when the governor and executive council commute the sentence.
Standing in the superior criminal court, the young Virginian heard his name pronounced by Judge George A. Sanderson without the quiver of an eyelash. If the man has any fears about meeting death in the form of a lightning stroke, he gave no indications of them during the few minutes that he stood erect before the judge in the courtroom.
Richeson walked steadily from the courtroom and was taken to the Charles street jail, there to remain until either he is removed to the state prison at Charlestown to be executed or to serve a life sentence, or is sent to an asylum for the criminal insane.
Several hours after being returned
to jail Richeson collapsed in his cell.
A guard heard him groaning and found the man doubled up as if in severe pain. Dr. Sargent said Richeson had suffered an attack of acute heart action.George V. Entering the King's

JUDGE CALEB H. NORRIS

Marion Jurist Defeated
by Cincinnati Minister.President Moore Recommends Numerous Reforms.

Columbus, O., Jan. 10.—At the opening of the twenty-third annual convention of the Ohio miners John Moore of Rendville was declared elected president of District 6, Ohio Mine Workers; John Zelenka of Bridgeport, vice president; George W. Savage of Columbus, secretary-treasurer; A. R. Watkins, Yorkville, international board member; Conrad Wein, Murray City; Thomas E.
Crawford, Hyserville, and Joseph Penman, Congo, auditors.

President Moore in his annual report recommended to the convention,
which will fix a new wage scale for Ohio to be certified to the international convention at Indianapolis
next week for ratification, the following: A mine-run system; a reform
in unfair and unreasonable differential pick and machine mining; an advance in wages consistent with the increased expenses at least in maintaining; if not improving, the American standard of living; and a universal half holiday on Saturday.

HOW VERY ODD
BRYAN SEES
DANGERBryan Sees Great Danger in Roosevelt Candidacy.

Philadelphia, Jan. 10. — William Jennings Bryan jumped into the Republican presidential arena when, in an interview, he declared that Colonel Roosevelt had no right even to think of again becoming a candidate for president of the United States.

"There is no unsurmountable objection to Mr. Roosevelt," said Colonel Bryan, "but the third term objection is one that can not be easily cast aside. I think this is the real, substantial objection. If he is big enough to overthrow the two-term precedent,
who is going to be big enough to establish a more binding one?"

TELLS DYNAMITING
STORYComrade of Bert Connors Admits Getting "Cold Feet."

Los Angeles, Jan. 10.—Joe Bishop,
a structural iron worker, a friend and co-worker of Bert Connors, swore that he was to have been a member of the dynamiting party to blow up the Hall of Records, but got "cold feet" and failed to show up at the appointed time, and then notified the police by telephone of what was going to take place.

Bishop is the first of a number of surprises the prosecution has promised to spring in the case now at issue in Judge Willis' department of the superior court, wherein Bert Connors is on trial for attempting to dynamite the Hall of Records.

OLD AGE PENSIONS.

Proposed by Congressman.
To give every man and woman over 60 years old a pension from the United States treasury, is the surprising proposal of a congressman.

What most old people need is help in keeping up strength and vigor. Thousands of them know that the greatest help they can get is our delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil, call Vinol.

Mrs. Mary Ivey, of Columbus, Ga., says: "If people only knew the good Vinol does old people you would be unable to supply the demand. I never took anything before that did me so much good as Vinol has done. It is the finest tonic and strength creator I ever used in my life."

Vinol renews the energy and strength of old people because it enriches their thinned blood and improves their appetite and digestion, and is also so pleasant to take that they like to use it. We guarantee Vinol to give perfect satisfaction and pay back your money if it does not. Blackmer & Tanquary.

YOUR HAIR NEEDS CULTURE
Just as your roses do. Noted New York and London women including the Duchess of Marlborough, use Mrs. Mason's Old English Shampoo Cream. There is nothing better. 25c a tube at Blackmer & Tanquary and other druggists.

Demand Comes From Everywhere

Hope, Ark., Jan. 4, 1912.

Herald Publishing Co.

Washington C. H., O.

Gentlemen.—I enclose 6 coupons and check for $1.18 including postage, for which send me by mail one Webster Dictionary.

Was very sorry to hear of the great fire in your city. The St. Louis Globe reported Sunday or Monday a two million dollar fire in Washington C. H., but no particulars and therefore I was anxiously waiting for The Herald which only came yesterday afternoon. I could not imagine a two million dollar fire in any other part of the city and told my family that it could not be any other locality except where it happened. I sympathize with the sufferers as they are old acquaintances.

Yours truly,

LOUIS BAER.

The leather-bound Webster's Standard Revised Dictionary, now being sold by the Daily Herald in accordance with its advertisements, is finding its way into the best homes in the city and county, and wherever the Daily Herald is a regular visitor. In addition to the steady daily sale in this office, the remarkably low price for such magnificent books, causes our friends in different parts of the country to order them by mail. The reason is plain. These Dictionaries cannot be equaled anywhere at the price. The above letter serves to show how others view the opportunity, although hundreds of miles away.

Mrs. Frank M. Fullerton was particularly interesting in current events and the serving of a dainty luncheon increased the afternoon's pleasure. Arrangements were made for the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the club on January 25th.

An anticipated event in club and musical circles is a song recital for which Miss Margaret McClure is issuing invitations for Tuesday afternoon, the 16th of January, at the home of Mrs. D. S. Craig.

Miss McClure has composed a number of songs and these songs will be sung by leading members and the opportunity of hearing the compositions of the young artist enjoyed by the Cecilians and a limited number of invited guests.

OLD AGE PENSIONS.

Proposed by Congressman.

To give every man and woman over 60 years old a pension from the United States treasury, is the surprising proposal of a congressman. What most old people need is help in keeping up strength and vigor.

Thousands of them know that the greatest help they can get is our delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil, call Vinol.

Mrs. Mary Ivey, of Columbus, Ga., says: "If people only knew the good Vinol does old people you would be unable to supply the demand. I never took anything before that did me so much good as Vinol has done. It is the finest tonic and strength creator I ever used in my life."

Vinol renews the energy and strength of old people because it enriches the thinned blood and improves their appetite and digestion, and is also so pleasant to take that they like to use it. We guarantee Vinol to give perfect satisfaction and pay back your money if it does not. Blackmer & Tanquary.

Hope, Ark., Jan. 4, 1912.

Herald Publishing Co.

Washington C. H., O.

Gentlemen—I enclose 6 coupons and check for $1.18 including postage, for which send me by mail one Webster Dictionary.

Was very sorry to hear of the great fire in your city. The St. Louis Globe reported Sunday or Monday a two million dollar fire in Washington C. H., but no particulars and therefore I was anxiously waiting for The Herald which only came yesterday afternoon. I could not imagine a two million dollar fire in any other part of the city and told my family that it could not be any other locality except where it happened. I sympathize with the sufferers as they are old acquaintances.

Yours truly,

LOUIS BAER.

The leather-bound Webster's Standard Revised Dictionary, now being sold by the Daily Herald in accordance with its advertisements, is finding its way into the best homes in the city and county, and wherever the Daily Herald is a regular visitor. In addition to the steady daily sale in this office, the remarkably low price for such magnificent books, causes our friends in different parts of the country to order them by mail. The reason is plain. These Dictionaries cannot be equaled anywhere at the price. The above letter serves to show how others view the opportunity, although hundreds of miles away.

RICHESON'S SENTENCE.

The Courts of Massachusetts have proven equal to the occasion and Clarence V. T. Richeson, the preacher murderer, must go to his death in the electric chair some time during the week beginning, May 19th.

There was some fear among the lawabiding people throughout the land that the confession of this craven coward and his feigned insanity would save him from the punishment which the laws have provided for murderers.

Whether one is a believer in capital punishment or not matters but little. The laws of Massachusetts provide for the infliction of the death penalty for murder, and if there ever was a case where the infliction of the death penalty was fully deserved, Richeson's crime presents that case.

It was not repentance for his crime which caused Richeson to confess. It was the fear of punishment. The visions of the execution room with the death chair in the corner over which was suspended the bright light. This vision penetrated the walls of his cell and stood by his cot at night and the craven coward took the one slender hope left and confessed. It has been customary in cases of confession of crime to commute the sentence to life imprisonment. But in this case the entire absence of any extenuating circumstances and the manifest motive for the action being so apparent, the prosecution refused to recommend any commutation of the penalty and the court refused to grant any plea for mercy.

It is to be sincerely hoped by all law-abiding, home-loving men and women now that this arch demon who has confessed his guilt to the most heinous crime, that the governor will allow the law to take its course.

In writing to the prosecutor, Thos. W. Lawson said:

"Better a million times that we of the chill-blooded North take example by our virtue worshipping, unbridled, license-hating brother of the South and lynch, hack and burn, than that we stand idly by and let the ulcered-brained sentimentalists police our highways and byways and schools and churches—a million times better.

"Is it possible that the sentimentalist's vision of the sorrow and miseries of the vilely criminal are going to drive the fathers, husbands and brothers of our land to make the rope, the gun and the torch the companions of their plows and Bibles?"

So far as the courts are concerned the law will take its course, and the chill-blooded, even-tempered men of the North need not change their mode of exacting expiation for crime.

Richeson should die. His crime is too monstrous for human beings to forgive, and the punishment which human laws have provided is far too inadequate to be tempered.

He should be sent, as speedily as possible to that higher court which alone has power to provide adequate punishment or show mercy to wretches as vile as Richeson.

Humanity can go no farther than to demand his life. Eternity must see the end of it all.

What We Need Most Are Uniform Divorce Laws

By TASKER L. ODDIE, Governor of Nevada

do not want divorce seekers, broken families and careless wives and husbands coming to us for freedom.

The great majority of people who dissolve their marriage ties are TYPICALLY EASTERN PEOPLE.

I BELIEVE THE TIME HAS COME FOR US HERE IN THE UNITED STATES TO TAKE A FIRM STAND UPON THIS QUESTION, TO WORK FOR A UNIFORM DIVORCE LAW THAT WILL REGULATE THIS EVIL AND WILL RESULT IN MORE JUSTICE TO ALL CONCERNED.

I am of the opinion that the divorce laws of New York state and some other commonwealths are TOO STRINGENT and that the laws of Nevada and some others are TOO LAX perhaps. I have advocated and many others are advocating through the press and the governors' conference the passage of uniform laws in all the states upon this matter.

I know that for this great country to arrive at anything like uniformity in divorce laws would be difficult, because divorce does not seem to be a matter that the national government can handle with facility, but the existence of the governors' conference makes it possible for the chief executives of each state to discuss the matter calmly and wisely and arrive at something like a UNIFORM STATUTE that could be passed by ALL THE STATES.

Poetry - Today

WILL AND THEODORE.

Castor and Pollux were famous of old,
They were companions as we now recall;
Prominent people, forsooth, we are told,
But to each other they were "Cas" and "Pol,"
They were as chummy as chummy could be,
Traveled together with smiles on each face;
Never a quarrel between them—you see,
Castor—he never got Pollux a place.

Damon and Pythias they were a pair
Held as examples to all of the youth;
Children were told how this couple would share
Troubles and gladness alike, in all truth,
Some people claim that the tale is a myth,
It is enshrouded in history's gloom,
Still we know this about Damon and Pyth,
Neither one framed for the other a boom.

David and Jonathan—shepherd and prince—
They were renowned for the friendship they had;
Nothing like it has been jotted down since;
Jonathan stuck to his friend 'gainst his dad,
They never figured when friendship must cease,
Gossips with them simply couldn't play hob;
They were as friendly as ever you please—
Jonathan never got David a job.

Cesar and Brutus were friends for a while,
Remus and Romulus once were a pair,
Once at the stories of each they would smile,
Each wore the toga the other would wear—
But like the oft-mentioned rift in the lute,
Something occurred to give friendship a jar—
Politics entered with whisper and hoot,
Boom bumped in boom, so, you see, there you are.

Once it was "Theodore," once it was "Will"— (Laura Jean Libbey could phrase this somehow;
She could provide it a title to thrill:
"Bosom Friends Yesterday, Strangers, Though, Now.")
David and Jonathan, Damon and Pyth—
They kept the flower of friendship in bloom;
This is the rule they accomplished it with;
Neither one passed to the other a boom.

—Chicago Post.

So far as the courts are concerned the law will take its course, and the chill-blooded, even-tempered men of the North need not change their mode of exacting expiation for crime.

Richeson should die. His crime is too monstrous for human beings to forgive, and the punishment which human laws have provided is far too inadequate to be tempered.

He should be sent, as speedily as possible to that higher court which alone has power to provide adequate punishment or show mercy to wretches as vile as Richeson.

Humanity can go no farther than to demand his life. Eternity must see the end of it all.

What We Need Most Are Uniform Divorce Laws

By TASKER L. ODDIE, Governor of Nevada

I do not want divorce seekers, broken families and careless wives and husbands coming to us for freedom.

The great majority of people who dissolve their marriage ties are TYPICALLY EASTERN PEOPLE.

I BELIEVE THE TIME HAS COME FOR US HERE IN THE UNITED STATES TO TAKE A FIRM STAND UPON THIS QUESTION, TO WORK FOR A UNIFORM DIVORCE LAW THAT WILL REGULATE THIS EVIL AND WILL RESULT IN MORE JUSTICE TO ALL CONCERNED.

I am of the opinion that the divorce laws of New York state and some other commonwealths are TOO STRINGENT and that the laws of Nevada and some others are TOO LAX perhaps. I have advocated and many others are advocating through the press and the governors' conference the passage of uniform laws in all the states upon this matter.

I know that for this great country to arrive at anything like uniformity in divorce laws would be difficult, because divorce does not seem to be a matter that the national government can handle with facility, but the existence of the governors' conference makes it possible for the chief executives of each state to discuss the matter calmly and wisely and arrive at something like a UNIFORM STATUTE that could be passed by ALL THE STATES.

Poetry—Today

WILL AND THEODORE.

Castor and Pollux were famous of old,
They were companions as we now recall;
Prominent people, forsooth, we are told,
But to each other they were "Caa" and "Pol,"
They were as chummy as chummy could be,
Traveled together with smiles on each face;
Never a quarrel between them—you see,
Castor—he never got Pollux a place.

Damon and Pythias they were a pair
Held as examples to all of the youth;
Children were told how this couple would share
Troubles and gladness alike, in all truth,
Some people claim that the tale is a myth,
It is enshrouded in history's gloom,
Still we know this about Damon and Pyth,
Neither one framed for the other a boom.

David and Jonathan—shepherd and prince—
They were renowned for the friendship they had;
Nothing like it has been jotted down since;
Jonathan stuck to his friend against his dad,
They never figured when friendship must cease,
Gossips with them simply couldn't play hob;
They were as friendly as ever you please—
Jonathan never got David a job.

Cesar and Brutus were friends for a while,
Remus and Romulus once were a pair,
Once at the stories of each they would smile,
Each wore the toga the other would wear—
But like the oft-mentioned rift in the lute,
Something occurred to give friendship a jar—
Politics entered with whisper and hoar,
Boom bumped in boom, so, you see, there you are.

Once it was "Theodore," once it was "Will"—
Laura Jean Libbey could phrase this somehow;
She could provide it a title to thrill:
"Bosom Friends Yesterday, Strangers, Though, Now!"
David and Jonathan, Damon and Pyth—
They kept the flower of friendship in bloom;
This is the rule they accomplished it with,
Neither one passed to the other a boom.

Wake Up With a "Dark Brown Taste"?

Get Rid of It! Run for OLIVE TABLETS!

There isn't the slightest need to wake up any morning with a "brown mouth." Ugh! No need to describe it.

Dr. Edwards has made "brown mouth" a thing of the past in thousands of homes with his Little Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Anyone who takes Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets the moment he suspects his liver and bowels, never has "a dark brown taste," a bad breath, a pimply face, constipation or any other form of bowel or liver disorder. Take one just the moment you suspect you are constipated or that your liver is out of order.

Thousands take one at bedtime every night just to keep the bowels regular, the liver in order, the mouth clean and the breath pure and sweet. Olive Tablets are made of pure vegetable compounds mixed with olive oil.

Dr. Edwards spent 17 years in practice and in laboratory experiments before he perfected Olive Tablets.

Why don't you try them instead of the severe kind of laxatives that gripe and only effect temporary relief?

"Every little Olive Tablet has a movement all its own."

Small Arsenal Stolen From Store

The police are looking for a thief who took advantage of the recent fire and stole nearly a dozen revolvers, two shot guns and a rifle from the Henry Sparks Hardware store on West Court street. The store was greatly damaged during the conflagration, and the doors and windows were broken out, allowing easy access to the interior. Some unprincipled rascal walked into the store some time immediately following the fire and carried off the articles above mentioned.

The revolvers were 32 caliber and are probably slightly rusted. One of the shot guns was a double-barrel hammerless. It is believed the thief has probably disposed of a part of the loot, and anyone hearing of a man with revolvers for sale will greatly aid the authorities if the information is communicated to them without delay.

Daniel Davis, a second termer doing fifteen years for assault, proved to be the missing Fred. "It is better that mother thought me dead than in prison," said Davis.

Small Arsenal Stolen From Store

The police are looking for a thief who took advantage of the recent fire and stole nearly a dozen revolvers, two shot guns and a rifle from the Henry Sparks Hardware store on West Court street. The store was greatly damaged during the conflagration, and the doors and windows were broken out, allowing easy access to the interior. Some unprincipled rascal walked into the store some time immediately following the fire and carried off the articles above mentioned.

The revolvers were 32 caliber and are probably slightly rusted. One of the shot guns was a double-barrel hammerless. It is believed the thief has probably disposed of a part of the loot, and anyone hearing of a man with revolvers for sale will greatly aid the authorities if the information is communicated to them without delay.

Battles With Octopus.

Monterey, Cal., Jan. 10.—While a crew of Japanese abalone divers was at work off the mouth of the San river a giant octopus caught T. Yamaguchi, one of the divers, in its tentacles, and came near squeezing the life out of him. For an hour and a half the diver struggled with the devil fish, which held him so tight he could not be hauled into the boat. His diving suit was the only thing that saved his life.

Mother Finds Son In Penitentiary

Fred Davis, aged 31, whom his mother has long mourned as dead, has been found. A few days ago his mother, Mrs. Nancy Davis, aged 78, of Vigo, Ross county, sent a picture of her son, Fred, to Warden Jones of the penitentiary, telling him she was sick and asking him to ascertain if her son was in the prison.

Daniel Davis, a second term doing fifteen years for assault, proved to be the missing Fred. "It is better that mother thought me dead than in prison," said Davis.

Local Man One of Heirs To $185,000,000 Estate

George B. Swope, Descendant of Famous Wertz Family Which Has Joined Together to Fight for German Estate.

The famous Wertz family at a recent meeting in Chicago, Ill., decided to bring suit against the German government to regain an estate valued in excess of $185,000,000 which the Wertz heirs allege is due them as descendants of Paul Wertz, the great German warrior who did so much for his country during the 30-year war.

A great deal of local interest will be manifested in this action of the heirs, when it is known that George B. Swope is one of the several hundred heirs who will fight for the estate which they claim is by rights their own.

Mr. Swope's mother was Susan Wertz and her father and mother came from Germany and settled in Pennsylvania. They were closely related to the famous General Susan Wertz was born about 1820, in the state of Pennsylvania.

The recent action of the heirs, in which Mr. Swope is interested, is given in a report sent out from Chicago, under date of Jan. 7th, which says:

"Officers and Directors of the Wertz Family Association of America, at the end of a three-days meeting here to-night, voted to join the German association of the family and send two delegates to Hamburg, Germany, this spring, to aid in prosecuting the family's suit against the German government.

The Wertz family now consists of many hundreds of members, with organizations in the United States, Germany and France. They claim to be descendants of Paul Wertz, German Field Marshal during the Thirty Years' War.

"At his death Paul Wertz is said to have left a large unsettled estate, now estimated to be worth $185,000,000. Members of the Wertz family here allege that this property is held by the German government illegally."

offense is alleged to have taken place on June 17th, 1911, when Rankin is said to have obtained $175 from Eva Lynch, widow of Daniel Lynch. He is charged with having obtained the money with the avowed intention of investing it for Mrs. Lynch, but unlawfully and fraudulently embezzled and converted it to his own use.

Rankin was in the court house shortly after the jury returned the indictment against him, but no bond was furnished at the time.

It is expected that he will be in and arrange for bond within the next twenty-four hours.

John M. Harley was indicted for failure to support a minor child which is eleven months of age.

Chas. Fulton, who attacked and seriously injured N. B. Fulton, his uncle, of near Waterloo on December 11 and was held to the grand jury under $1000 bond, charged with cutting with intent to kill, was indicted for cutting with intent to wound. Fulton used a corn knife in the attack on his uncle, a full account of which was published in The Herald at the time.

Gilbert Syferd, a prosperous farmer of near Buena Vista, was indicted for assault and battery upon Walter R. Smith, a school teacher. This case came up from the court of J. D. Fealy, justice of the peace. According to Smith's statement, he was hunting upon the farm upon which Syferd lived, and was attacked with an ax. This occurred Dec. 1, 1911.

Hughey Backenstoe was indicted for using profane and licentious language in the presence of a female. This case was first tried in J. B. Koontz's court, and Backenstoe, who is only 17 years of age, was bound over to the grand jury under $300 bond.

Loss $65,000 Above Insurance

The Dahl-Millikan Grocery Co.'s loss was practically all adjusted Tuesday, to the satisfaction of all parties concerned, but after the payment of about $75,000 insurance, the loss above that figure reaches nearly $65,000.

The total loss was at first believed to be around $100,000, but consequent developments show that the real loss was approximately $140,000 with $75,000 insurance, making the loss to the company a heavy one indeed.

There will probably be several thousand dollars salvage in the basement of the building destroyed, where over $20,000 worth of canned goods was stored. Only the top boxes of the canned goods appear to be worthless, and further down the goods are expected to be in good condition.

Valuable Pedigree Of Rose of Sharon

Hanging in the office of Professor C. S. Plumb, head of the department of animal husbandry, of the College of Agriculture, Columbus, is a copy of the pedigree of Rose of Sharon, one of the most noted Shorthorn cows of American history. This historical bill, the gift of Almer Hegler of this city, represents probably the first type of printed pedigree published in this country.

Rose of Sharon was bred by Thomas Bates, of England, one of the first men to take up cattle breeding as a science, and the man to whom Shorthorn breeders of today are greatly indebted for the excellence of the breed. She was a roan heifer, calving August 12, 1832, and imported to the United States in 1834 by the Ohio importing company, the original cattle importing company of America.

Mr. Hegler's grandfather was one of the stockholders of the company and this pedigree, with some others was found in an old piece of furniture and was donated by the finders to the university.

PURITY POTATO CHIPS SOLD AT ALL GROCERIES.

Loss $65,000 Above Insurance

The Dahl-Millikan Grocery Co.'s loss was practically all adjusted Tuesday, to the satisfaction of all parties concerned, but after the payment of about $75,000 insurance, the loss above that figure reaches nearly $65,000.

The total loss was at first believed to be around $100,000, but consequent developments show that the real loss was approximately $140,000 with $75,000 insurance, making the loss to the company a heavy one indeed.

There will probably be several thousand dollars salvage in the basement of the building destroyed, where over $20,000 worth of canned goods was stored. Only the top boxes of the canned goods appear to be worthless, and further down the goods are expected to be in good condition.

George Ordered To Leave the City

Wheeler George, over whom an old fine of $200 and costs and six months in the workhouse has been hanging so long as he remained out of the city, dropped back this week to ascertain the new mayor's attitude toward allowing him to remain.

He appeared before Mayor Smith Wednesday morning and was given until Thursday morning to get out of town or go to the workhouse if he was caught here after that time. George agreed to leave, and was informed by Mayor Smith that when he wanted him back he would send for him.

George is the man who was stabbed by John Elder during a fight in which it appeared that George was the aggressor.

Valuable Pedigree Of Rose of Sharon

Hanging in the office of Professor C. S. Plumb, head of the department of animal husbandry, of the College of Agriculture, Columbus, is a copy of the pedigree of Rose of Sharon, one of the most noted Shorthorn cows of American history. This historical bill, the gift of Almer Hegler of this city, represents probably the first type of printed pedigree published in this country.

Rose of Sharon was bred by Thomas Bates, of England, one of the first men to take up cattle breeding as a science, and the man to whom Shorthorn breeders of today are generally indebted for the excellence of the breed. She was a roan heifer, calving August 12, 1832, and imported to the United States in 1834 by the Ohio importing company, the original cattle importing company of America.

Mr. Hegler's grandfather was one of the stockholders of the company and this pedigree, with some other was found in an old piece of furniture and was donated by the family to the university.

AVOID HARSH DRUGS.

Cathartics Tend to Cause Injury to the Bowels.

If you are subject to constipation,
you should avoid strong drugs and cathartics. They only give temporary relief and their reaction is harmful and sometimes more annoying than constipation. They in no way effect a cure and their tendency is to weaken the already weak organs with which they come in contact.

We honestly believe that we have the best constipation treatment ever known. Our faith in it is so strong that we sell it on the positive guarantee that it shall not cost the user a cent if it does not give entire satisfaction and completely remedy constipation. This preparation is called
"Small Orderlies." These are prompt,
pleasant, and most effective in action. They are made of a recent discovery. Their principal ingredient is odorless, tasteless, and non-toxic. Combined with other well-known ingredients, long established for their usefulness in the treatment of constipation, it forms a preparation which is eaten just like candy.
It may be taken at any time,
day or night, without fear of causing any inconvenience
whatever. They do not gripe, purge, nauseate, or cause any pain or excessive looseness
of the bowels. They are ideal for children, weak, delicate persons,
and aged people, as well as for the heavily person.

They come in three size packages,
tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets, 25
cents; 60 tablets, 50 cents. Remember, you can obtain them only at our store. The Rexall Store, Blackmer

Pipes Explode

In Cook Stove

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Seibert, living near Jeffersonville, had a very close call from death Tuesday, when the steam pipes in their cook stove,
which furnished hot water for the bath room, blew up, tearing the stove to pieces and injuring both Mr.
and Mrs. Seibert.

The pipes leading to the bath room
had frozen up, and the hot cook stove soon had the water within the pipes heated to the exploding point.
Mrs. Seibert happened to be on the opposite side of the stove from where the explosion occurred, and escaped with slight injuries. Mr. Seibert was less fortunate, being blown across the room and cut and bruised by flying fragments of the stove.

A large section of the stove tore
out a window and crushed in the side of a small building opposite the window. The frozen pipes are supposed to have confined the steam until the pressure was too great and the explosion took place.

This is the last discount day for gas and electric light bills.

THE DANGER OF LA GRIPPE

Is its fatal tendency to pneumonia.

To cure your la grippe coughs take

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound.

R. E. Fisher, Washington, Kas., says:

"I was troubled with a severe attack of la grippe and nothing I used did me any good and I was threatened with pneumonia. A friend advised me to use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and I got some at once. I was relieved from the very first. By the time I had taken three bottles my la grippe was gone. I believe Foley's Honey and Tar Compound to be the best medicine I ever used and always keep a bottle
with me." Blackmer & Tanquary.

Grand Jury Busy

In Clinton County

The Clinton county grand jury

was in session three days last week, returning seventeen indictments. A number of the indictments were against proprietors of "blind tigers"

with which Wilmington has been infestated.

Bud McMillin and Jesse Moore,

the men who fought with knives

some ten days ago, were indicted.

These men worked on the new school house in this city. Joe Ballinger,

the only witness to the cutting affray

who had been held in the county jail

at Wilmington, was released, paid

$3 for witness fees, and is now working in this city again.

WHAT MAKES A PRIZE FIGHT?

Tommy Ryan Says It Is Scientific Exhibition of Art of Attack and Self-Defense.

No matter where glove contests are permitted in this country the question arises, "What is the difference between boxing and prize fighting?"
Several attempts have been made to draw the line in the courts and in some instances promoters have secured decisions in their favor.

The most recent champion of scientific boxing is Tommy Ryan of

ponents by the pulling and hauling,
which is quite scientific in its way and
by no means as rough as it appears.

It is often the style of some boxers
to win this way. Sometimes accidents will happen in infighting, as
they will in any sport.

Quits as Cub Scout.

Charley Murphy, president of the Cubs, learned that his old enemy, Dan

Johnson, had signed George Huff to scout for the American league. Huff

is the most successful major league

scout. He has been on the Cub payroll for several years, and helped to build up the great Cub machine. Huff

is athletic director of the University of Illinois when he isn't in baseball.

Huff will be assigned to a club that is badly in need of new material.

SHAFT FOR CHERRY VICTIMS

Monument Unveiled to the Memory of

Those Who Died in Mine

Disaster.

Bloomington, Ill.—Recently at Cherry a monument was unveiled to the memory of the 256 men and boys

who lost their lives in the great mining disaster over two years ago. The officers of the state miners' organizations had charge of the ceremonies

and prominent labor leaders were present. The memorial—a simple shaft of gray granite 14 feet high—

was unveiled by the daughter of a

Syracuse, who held the middle-weight

title after Bob Fitzsimmons relinquished it. Ryan is a close student of fistiana and is able to give an intelligent argument in its favor. The other day he was quoted in this manner:

"The question has often been put to me, 'What is a prize fight if it isn't brutal?' Other persons want to know

why the boxers pull and haul, hit in the clinches, and so forth, or why a

man will strike his opponent when

the latter apparently is only half off

the floor. Still others want to know

why the boxers shake hands at the

start and at the end of a bout and

what is the sensation when a man is

floored or knocked out.

"First of all, I would say that there

is no such a thing as a prize fight.

That word is a misnomer. Thirty or

forty years ago it was different, for in

those days men fought with the bare

knuckles, and the sport was brutal,

but the name 'prize fight' has stuck

to the present day, and what some

people persist in calling a 'prize fight'

is nothing more or less than a scientific exhibition of the art of attack
and self-defense, and of the same nature as any other exhibition of sport
which is won by endurance and skill.
The exhibitions are not brutal.

"Boxers pull, haul and hit in
clinches because some of them have become accustomed to what is known
as 'infighting' and they are a great
deal better when boxing close to their
opponents than in sparring at long
range. They try to tire out their op-

the clinches, and so forth, or why a
man will strike his opponent when
the latter apparently is only half off
the floor. Still others want to know
why the boxers shake hands at the
start and at the end of a bout and
what is the sensation when a man is
floored or knocked out.

"First of all, I would say that there
is no such a thing as a prize fight.
That word is a misnomer. Thirty or
forty years ago it was different, for in
those days men fought with the bare
knuckles, and the sport was brutal,
but the name 'prize fight' has stuck
to the present day, and what some
people persist in calling a 'prize fight'

is nothing more or less than a scientific exhibition of the art of attack
and self-defense, and of the same nature as any other exhibition of sport
which is won by endurance and skill.
The exhibitions are not brutal.

"Boxers pull, haul and hit in
clinches because some of them have
become accustomed to what is known
as 'infighting' and they are a great
deal better when boxing close to their
opponents than in sparring at long
range. They try to tire out their opponents by the pulling and hauling,

which is quite scientific in its way and
by no means as rough as it appears.

It is often the style of some boxers
to win this way. Sometimes accidents will happen in infighting, as
they will in any sport."

Pipes Explode In Cook Stove

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Seibert, living near Jeffersonville, had a very close call from death Tuesday, when the steam pipes in their cook stove, which furnished hot water for the bath room, blew up, tearing the stove to pieces and injuring both Mr. and Mrs. Seibert.

The pipes leading to the bath room had frozen up, and the hot cook stove soon had the water within the pipes heated to the exploding point. Mrs. Seibert happened to be on the opposite side of the stove from where the explosion occurred, and escaped with slight injuries. Mr. Seibert was less fortunate, being blown across the room and cut and bruised by flying fragments of the stove.

A large section of the stove tore out a window and crushed in the side of a small building opposite the window. The frozen pipes are supposed to have confined the steam until the pressure was too great and the explosion took place.

WHAT MAKES A PRIZE FIGHT?

Tommy Ryan Says It Is Scientific Exhibition of Art of Attack and Self-Defense.

No matter where glove contests are permitted in this country the question arises, "What is the difference between boxing and prize fighting?" Several attempts have been made to draw the line in the courts and in some instances promoters have secured decisions in their favor.

The most recent champion of scientific boxing is Tommy Ryan of Syracuse, who held the middle-weight title after Bob Fitzsimmons relinquished it. Ryan is a close student of fistiana and is able to give an intelligent argument in its favor. The other day he was quoted in this manner:

"The question has often been put to me, 'What is a prize fight if it isn't brutal?' Other persons want to know why the boxers pull and haul, hit in the clinches, and so forth, or why a man will strike his opponent when the latter apparently is only half off the floor. Still others want to know why the boxers shake hands at the start and at the end of a bout and what is the sensation when a man is floored or knocked out.

"First of all, I would say that there is no such thing as a prize fight. That word is a misnomer. Thirty or forty years ago it was different, for in those days men fought with the bare knuckles, and the sport was brutal, but the name 'prize fight' has stuck to the present day, and what some people persist in calling a 'prize fight' is nothing more or less than a scientific exhibition of the art of attack and self-defense, and of the same nature as any other exhibition of sport which is won by endurance and skill. The exhibitions are not brutal.

"Second, pull, haul and hit in clinches because some of them have become accustomed to what is known as 'infighting' and they are a great deal better when boxing close to their opponents than in sparring at long range. They try to use all their coponents by the pulling and hauling, which is quite scientific in its way and by no means as rough as it appears. It is often the style of some boxers to win this way. Sometimes accidents will happen in infighting, as they will in any sport."

Quite as Cub Scout.

Charley Murphy, president of the Cubs, learned that his old enemy, Ban Johnson, had signed George Huff to scout for the American league. Huff is the most successful major league scout. He has been on the Cub payroll for several years, and helped to build up the great Cub machine. Huff is athletic director of the University of Illinois when he isn't in baseball. Huff will be assigned to a club that is badly in need of new material.

SHAFT FOR CHERRY VICTIMS

Monument Unveiled to the Memory of Those Who Died in Mine Disaster.

Bloomington, Ill.—Recently at Cherry a monument was unveiled to the memory of the 256 men and boys who lost their lives in the great mining disaster over two years ago. The officers of the state miners' organizations had charge of the ceremonies and prominent labor leaders were present. The memorial—a simple shaft of gray granite 14 feet high—was unveiled by the daughter of a man who had lost his life in the tragedy, and seated upon the speakers' platform were 29 survivors who were rescued after having been imprisoned one week in the burning mine. Among the speakers was John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers.

Cherry today is greatly changed from what it was two years ago. Instead of one-half of the male inhabitants almost in the twinkling of the eye, the town was crippled for a time, but has since been slowly recovering, thanks to the liberality of the American nation.

The sum of $316,424 was contributed for the relief of the widows and fatherless children. The Illinois legislature appropriated $100,000. Up to June 1, 1911, the commission in charge had distributed $81,498, leaving most of the remainder in trust as a pension fund for the relief of those robbed of their bread winners. Relief was afforded every widow and every dependent child, and they will be taken care of for life if necessary. Placed on a cash basis, no greater charitable work has ever been accomplished, nor has any relief movement been handled as economically or as successfully.

FIRST AERIAL POSTCARDS

Though the carrying of mails by aeroplane has been tried in America, France and Germany, England was the first to establish a regular aerial postal service, that between Hendon and Windsor. For this service the British postoffice issued the very attractive postcards here illustrated, and they proved decidedly popular both with the English and with visitors from other lands who wished to send a novel communication to friends at home. The profits of the cards are devoted to charity.

KICK THAT SAVED A LIFE

While running his train out of Dent, Minn., the other day, W. A. Beardsley, engineer on a freight train, saw what seemed to be a blue parcel lying between the rails about twenty car lengths ahead. But it turned out to be a child, who arose and sat down on one of the rails. The emergency brake was applied, but it was impossible to stop in time. Beardsley ran out on the pilot, intending to pick the child up. He reached the pilot too late, but had time to extend his foot and kick the child off the rail and down the embankment. The train was stopped, the child picked up and brought back to Dent. A doctor was summoned and it was found that the child was without except that it had a bruise where the engineer's shoe had struck it.

And he hurried the doctor on with out further parley or excuse.

Lestrangle was in the room behind the office, smoking one of Bailey's cigars and listening to that gentleman's vigorous remarks concerning managers who couldn't keep out of their own machinery, the patient not having considered it worth while to explain Dick's share in the mischief. An omission which Dick himself promptly remedied in his anxious condition.

Later, when the arm was being swathed in white linen, its owner spoke to his companion of the morning.

"I hope you didn't annoy Miss Ffrench with this trifling matter, as you came in."

"I didn't speak to her at all, only to my uncle."

"Very good."

Something in the too-indolent tone roused Dick's usually dormant observation. Startled, he scrutinized Lestrangle.

"Is that why you bothered yourself with me?" he stammered. "Is that why?"

"Shut up!" warned Lestrangle forbiddingly and inelegantly. "That isn't tight enough, Doc. You know I'm experienced at this sort of thing, and I'm going to use this arm."

But Dick was not to be silenced in his new enlightenment. When the surgeon momentarily turned away, he leaned nearer, his plump face grim.

"If I brace up, it won't be for Emily, but for you, Darling Lestrangle," he whispered viciously. "She don't want me and I don't want her, that way I've got over that. And, oh, confound it, I'm sorry, old man!"

"Shut up!" said Lestrangle again.

But though Dick's very sympathy unconsciously showed the hopeless chasm between the racing driver and Miss Ffrench, the hurt did not cloud the cordial smile Lestrangle sent to mitigate his command.

CHAPTER VII.

Emily first heard the full story of the accident that evening, when Dick sat opposite her on the veranda and gave the account in frank anxiety and dejection.

"We're going down tonight on the nine o'clock train," he added in conclusion. "Tomorrow morning he'll spend practicing on the track, and tomorrow evening at 6 the race starts. And Lestrangle starts crippled, because I am a clumsy idiot. He laughs at me, but—he'd do that anyhow."

"Yes," agreed Emily. "He would do that anyhow." Her eyes were wide and terrified, the little hands she clasped in her lap were quite cold. "I wish, I wish he had never come to this place."

"Oh, you do?" Dick said oddly. "Maybe he will, too, before he gets through with us. We're a nasty lot, we Ffrenches; a lot of blue-blooded snobs without any red blood in us. Are you going to say good-by to me? I won't be home until it's over."

She looked at him, across the odorous dusk slowly silencing as the moon rose.

"You are going to be with him?"

Dick smoothed his leggings before standing up, surveying his strict motor costume with a gloomy pride not to be concealed.

"Yes, I'm representing our company. Lestrangle might want some backing if any disputes turned up. Uncle Ethan nearly had a fit when Bailey told him what I was going to do; he called me Richard for the first time in my life. I guess I'll be some good yet, if every one except Lestrangle did think I was a chump."

"I am very sure you will," she answered gently. "Good-by, Dick; you look very nice."

When he reached the foot of the steps, her voice recalled him, as she stood leaning over the rail.

"Dick, you could not make him give it up, not race this time?"

He stared up at her white figure.

"No, I could not. Don't you suppose I tried?"

"I suppose you did," she admitted, and went back to her seat.

The June night was very quiet. Once a sleepy bird stirred in the honeysuckle vines and chirped through the dark. Far below the throb of a motor passed down the road, dying away again to leave silence. Suddenly Emily Ffrench hid her face on the arm of her chair and the tears overflowed.

There was no consciousness of time while that inarticulate passion of dread spent itself. But it was nearly half an hour later when she started up at the echo of a light step on the gravel path, dashing her handkerchief across her eyes.

It was incredible, but it was true: Lestrangle himself was standing before her at the foot of the low stairs, the moonlight glinting across his uncovered bronze head and bright, clear eyes.

"I beg pardon for trespass, Miss Ffrench," he said, "but your cousin tells me he has been saying a great deal of nonsense to you about this race, and that you were so very good as to feel some concern regarding it. Really, I had to run up and set that right; I couldn't leave you to be annoyed by Mr. Ffrench's nerves. Will you forgive me?"

Like sun through a mist his blithe

voice cleaved through her distress. Before the tranquil sanity of his regard, her painted terrors suddenly showed as the artificial canvas scenes of a stage, unreal, untrue.

"It was like you to come," she answered, with a shaking sigh that was half sob. "I was frightened, yes."

"There is no cause. A dozen other men take the same chance as Rupert and I; the driver who alternates with me, for instance. This is our life."

"Your arm—"

"Is well enough." He laughed a little. "You will see many a bandaged arm before the twenty-four hours are up; few of us finish without a scratch or strain or blister. This is a man's game, but it's not half so destructive as football. You wished me good luck for the Georgia race; will you repeat the honor before I go back to Ffrench?"

"I wish you," she said unsteadily. "Every kind of success, now and always. You saved Dick today—of all else you have done for him and for me I have not words to speak. But it made it harder to bear the thought of your hurt and risk from the hurt, when I knew that I had sent Dick there, who caused it."

Lestrangle hesitated, himself troubled. Her soft loveliness in the delicate light that left her eyes unreadable depths of shadow, her timidity and anxiety for his safety, were from their very unconsciousness most dangerous. And while he grasped at self-control, she came still nearer to the head of the steps and held out her small fair hand, mistaking his silence for leave-taking.

"Good night; and I thank you for coming. I am not used to so much consideration."

Her accents were unsure when she would have made them most certain, with her movement the handkerchief fell from her girdle to his feet. Mechanically Lestrangle recovered the bit of linen, and felt it lie wet in his fingers. Wet—

"Emily!" he cried abruptly, and sprang the brief step between them.

Her white, terrified face turned to

Her Accents Were Unsure When She Would Have Made Them Most Certain.

him in the moonlight, but he saw her eyes. And seeing, he kissed her.

The moment left no time for speech. Some one was coming down the drawing-room toward the long windows. Dick's impatient whistle sounded shrilly from the park. Panting, quivering, Emily drew from the embrace and fled within.

She had no doubt of Lestrangle, no question of his serious meaning—he had that force of sincerity which made his silence more convincing than the protestations of others. But alone in her room she laid her cheek against the hand he had touched.

"I wish I had died in the convent," she cried to her heart. "I wish I had died before I made him unhappy too."

CHAPTER VII.

Morning found a pale and languid Emily across the breakfast table from Mr. Ffrench. Yet, by a contradiction of the heart, her pride in loving and being loved so overbore the knowledge that only sorrow could result to herself and Lestrangle, that her eyes shone wide and lustrous and her lips curved softly.

Mr. Ffrench was almost in high spirits.

"The boy was merely developing," he stated, over his grape-fruit. "I have been unjust to Richard. For two months Bailey has been talking of his interest in the business and attendance at the factory, but I was incredulous. Although I fancied I observed a change—have you observed a change in him, Emily?"

"Yes," Emily confirmed, "a very great change. He has grown up, at last."

"Ah? I cannot express to you how it gratifies me to have a Ffrench representing me in public; have you seen the morning journals?"

"I have just come down stairs."

He picked up the newspaper beside him and passed across the folded page.

"All in readiness for Beach Contest," the head-lines ran. "Last big driver to arrive, Lestrangle is in Mercury camp with R. Ffrench, representative of Company."

And there was a blurred picture of a speeding car with driver and mechanic masked to goblinsque non-identity, with the legend underneath: "Darling Lestrangle, in his Mercury on the Georgia course."

"Next year I shall make him part owner. It was always my poor brother's desire to have the future name still Ffrench and Ffrench. He was not thinking of Richard then; he had hope of—"

Emily lifted her gaze from the picture, recalled to attention by the break.

"Of?" she echoed vaguely.

"Of one who is unworthy thought. Richard has redeemed our family from extinction; that is at rest." He paused for an instant. "My dear child, when you are married and established, I shall be content."

Her breathing quickened, her courage rose to the call of the moment.

"If Dick is here, if he is instead of a substitute," she said, carefully quiet in manner, "would it matter, since I am only a girl, whom I married, Uncle Ethan?"

The recollection of that evening when Emily had given her promise of aid stirred under Mr. Ffrench's self-absorption. He looked across the table at her colorless, eager face with perhaps his first thought of what that promise might have cost her.

"No," he replied kindly. "It is part of my satisfaction that you are set free to follow your own choice, without thought of utility or fortune. Of course, I need not say provided the man is of your own class and associations. We will fear no more low marriages."

She had known it before, but it was hard to hear the sentence embodied in words. Emily folded her hands over the paper in her lap and the pleasant breakfast room darkened before her. Mr. Ffrench continued speaking of Dick, unheard.

When the long meal was ended and her uncle withdrew to meet Bailey in the library, Emily escaped outdoors.

There was a quaint summer house, part way down the park, an ancient white pavilion standing beside the brook that gurgled by on its way to the Hudson, where the young girl often passed her hours. She went there now, carrying her little work-basket and the newspaper containing the picture of Lestrangle.

"I will save it," was her thought. "Perhaps I may find better ones—this does not show his face—but I will have this now. It may be a long time before I see him."

But she sat with the embroidery scissors in her hand, nevertheless, without cutting the reprint. Lestrangle would return to the factory, she never doubted, and all would continue as before, except that she must not see him. He would understand that it was not possible for anything else to happen, at least for many years. Perhaps, after Dick was married—

The green and gold beauty of the morning hurt her with the memory of that other sunny morning, when he had so easily taken from her the task she hated and strove to bear. And he had succeeded, how he had succeeded! Who else in the world could have so transformed Dick? Leaning on the table, her round chin in her palm as she gazed down at the paper in her lap, her fancy slipped back to that night on the Long Island road, when she had first seen his serene genius for setting all things right. How like him that elimination of Dick, instead of a romantic and impracticable attempt to escort her himself.

A bush cracked stiffly at some one's passage; a shadow fell across her.

"Caught!" laughed Lestrangle's glad, exultant voice. "Since you look at the portrait, how shall the original dare to present himself? See, I can match." He held out a card burned at the corners and streaked with dirt. "The first time I saw your writing, and found my own name there."

Amazed, Emily sat up, and met in his glowing face all incarnate joy of life and youth.

"Oh!" she gasped piteously.

"You are surprised that I am here? My dear, my dear, after last night did you think I could be anywhere else?"

"The race—"

"I know that track too well to need much practice, and I had the machine out at dawn. My partner is busy practicing this morning, and I'll be back in a couple of hours. I was afraid, the gray eyes were so gentle in their brilliancy, 'I was afraid you might worry, Emily.'"

Serenely he assumed possession of her, and the assumption was very sweet. He had not touched her, yet Emily had the sensation of brutally thrusting him away when she spoke.

"How could I do anything else," she asked with desolation, "since we must never meet each other any more? Only, you will not go far away—you will stay where I can sometimes see you as we pass? I—I think I could not bear it to have you go away."

"Emily!"

The scissors clinked sharply to the floor as she held out her white hands in deprecation of his cry; the tears rushed to her eyes.

And he hurried the doctor on with out further parley or excuse.

Lestrangle was in the room behind the office, smoking one of Bailey's cigars and listening to that gentleman's vigorous remarks concerning managers who couldn't keep out of their own machinery. The patient not having considered it worth while to explain Dick's share in the mischance, an omission which Dick himself promptly remedied in his anxious contrition.

Later, when the arm was being washed in white linen, its owner spoke to his companion of the morning.

"I hope you didn't annoy Miss French with this trifling matter, as you came in."

"I didn't speak to her at all, only to my uncle."

"Very good."

Something in the too-indolent tone roused Dick's usually dormant observation. Startled, he scrutinized Lestrangle.

"Is that why you bothered yourself with me?" he stammered. "Is that why?"

"Shut up!" warned Lestrangle forcibly and inelegantly. "That isn't tight enough, Doc. You know I'm experienced at this sort of thing, and I'm going to use this arm."

But Dick was not to be silenced in his new enlightenment. When the surgeon momentarily turned away, he leaned nearer, his plump face grim.

"If I brace up, it won't be for Emily, but for you, Darling Lestrangle," he whispered viciously. "She don't want me and I don't want her, that way I've got over that. And, oh, confound it, I'm sorry, old man!"

"Shut up!" said Lestrangle again.

But though Dick's very sympathy unconsciously showed the hopeless chasm between the racing driver and Miss French, the hurt did not cloud the cordial smile Lestrangle sent to mitigate his command.

CHAPTER VI.

Emily first heard the full story of the accident that evening, when Dick sat opposite her on the veranda and gave the account in frank anxiety and dejection.

"We're going down tonight on the nine o'clock train," he added in conclusion. "Tomorrow morning he'll spend practicing on the track, and tomorrow evening at 6 the race starts. And Lestrangle starts crippled, because I am a clumsy idiot. He laughs at me, but he'd do that anyhow."

"Yes," agreed Emily. "He would do that anyhow." Her eyes were wide and terrified, the little hands she clasped in her lap were quite cold. "I wish, I wish he had never come to this place."

"Oh, you do?" Dick said oddly. "Maybe he will, too, before he gets through with us. We're a nasty lot, we Frenches, a lot of blue-blooded snobs without any red blood in us. Are you going to say good-by to me? I won't be home until it's over."

She looked at him, across the odorous dusk slowly silvering as the moon rose.

"You are going to be with him?"

Dick smoothed his leggings before standing up, surveying his strict motor costume with a gloomy pride not to be concealed.

"Yes, I'm representing our company. Lestrangle might want some backing if any disputes turned up. Uncle Ethan nearly had a fit when Bailey told him what I was going to do; he called me Richard for the first time in my life. I guess I'll be some good yet, if every one except Lestrangle did think I was a chump."

"I am very sure you will," she answered gently. "Good-by, Dick; you look very nice."

When he reached the foot of the steps, her voice recalled him, as she stood leaning over the rail.

"Dick, you could not make him give it up, not race this time?"

He stared up at her white figure. "No, I could not. Don't you suppose I tried?"

"I suppose you did," she admitted, and went back to her seat.

The June night was very quiet. Once a sleepy bird stirred in the honeysuckle vines and chirped through the dark. Far below the throb of a motor passed down the road, dying away again to leave silence. Suddenly Emily French hid her face on the arm of her chair and the tears overflowed.

There was no consciousness of time while that inarticulate passion of dread spent itself. But it was nearly half an hour later when she started up at the edge of a light step on the gravel path, feeling her handkerchief across her eyes.

It was terrible, but it was true: Lestrangle himself was standing before her at the foot of the low stairs, the moonlight gleaming across his unshaven face and his hair, clear

as her garden for summer. His tells me he has been saying a great deal of nonsense to you about this race, and that you were so very good as to feel some concern regarding it. Really, I had to run up and set that right; I couldn't leave you to be annoyed by Mr. French's nerves. Will you forgive me?"

Like sun through a mist his blithe

voice cleaved through her distress. Before the tranquil sanity of his regard, her painted terrors suddenly showed as the artificial canvas scenes of a stage, unreal, untrue.

"It was like you to come," she answered, with a shaking sigh that was half sob. "I was frightened, yes."

"There is no cause. A dozen other men take the same chance as Rupert and I; the driver who alternates with me, for instance. This is our life."

"Is well enough." He laughed a little. "You will see many a bandaged arm before the twenty-four hours are up; few of us finish without a scratch or strain or blister. This is a man's game, but it's not half so destructive as football. You wished me good luck for the Georgia race; will you repeat the honor before I go back to French?"

"I wish you," she said unsteadily. "Every kind of success, now and always. You saved Dick today—of all else you have done for him and for me I have not words to speak. But it made it harder to bear the thought of your hurt and risk from the hurt, when I knew that I had sent Dick there, who caused it."

Lestrangle hesitated, himself troubled. Her soft loveliness in the delicate light that left her eyes unreadable depths of shadow, her timidity and anxiety for his safety, were from their very unconsciousness most dangerous. And while he grapsed at self-control, she came still nearer to the head of the steps and held out her small fair hand, mistaking his silence for leave-taking.

Her accents were unsure when she would have made them most certain, with her movement the handkerchief fell from her girdle to his feet. Mechanically Lestrangle recovered the bit of linen, and felt it lie wet in his fingers. Wet—

"Emily!" he cried abruptly, and sprang the brief step between them.

Her white, terrified face turned to him in the moonlight, but he saw her eyes. And seeing, he kissed her.

The moment left no time for speech. Some one was coming down the drawing-room toward the long windows. Dick's impatient whistle sounded shrilly from the park. Panting, quivering, Emily drew from the embrace and fled within.

She had no doubt of Lestrangle, no question of his serious meaning—he had that force of sincerity which made his silence more convincing than the protestations of others. But alone in her room she laid her cheek against the hand he had touched.

"I wish I had died in the convent," she cried to her heart. "I wish I had died before I made him unhappy too."

CHAPTER VII.

Morning found a pale and languid Emily across the breakfast table from Mr. French. Yet, by a contradiction of the heart, her pride in loving and being loved so overbore the knowledge that only sorrow could result to herself and Lestrangle, that her eyes shone wide and lustrous and her lips curved softly.

Mr. French was almost in high spirits.

"The boy was merely developing," he stated, over his grape-fruit. "I have been unjust to Richard. For two months Bailey has been talking of his interest in the business and attendance at the factory, but I was incredulous. Although I fancied I observed a change in him, Emily?"

"Yes," Emily confirmed, "a very great change. He has grown up, at last."

"Ah? I cannot express to you how it gratifies me to have a French representing me in public; have you seen the morning journals?"

"I have just come down stairs."

He picked up the newspaper beside him and passed across the folded page.

"All in readiness for Beach Contest," the headlines ran. "Last big driver to arrive, Lestrangle is in Mercury camp with R. French, representative of Company."

And there was a blurred picture of a speeding car with driver and mechanic masked to goblinlike non-identity, with the legend underneath: "Darling Lestrangle, in his Mercury on the Georgia course."

"Next year I shall make him part owner. It was always my poor brother's desire to have the future game still French and French. He was not thinking of Richard then; he had hope of—"

Emily lifted her gaze from the picture, recalled to attention by the break.

"Of?" she echoed vaguely.

Her breathing quickened, her courage rose to the call of the moment. "If Dick is here, if he is instead of a substitute," she said, carefully quiet in manner, "would it matter, since I am only a girl, whom I married, Uncle Ethan?"

The recollection of that evening when Emily had given her promise of aid stirred under Mr. French's self-absorption. He looked across the table at her colorless, eager face with perhaps his first thought of what that promise might have cost her.

"No," he replied kindly. "It is part of my satisfaction that you are set free to follow your own choice, without thought of utility or fortune. Of course, I need not say provided the man is of your own class and associations. We will fear no more low marriages."

She had known it before, but it was hard to hear the sentence embodied in words. Emily folded her hands over the paper in her lap and the pleasant breakfast room darkened before her. Mr. French continued speaking of Dick, unheard.

When the long meal was ended and her uncle withdrew to meet Bailey in the library, Emily escaped outdoors.

There was a quaint summer house part way down the park, an ancient white pavilion standing beside the brook that gurgled by on its way to the Hudson, where the young girl often passed her hours. She went there now, carrying her little work-basket and the newspaper containing the picture of Lestrangle.

"I will save it," was her thought. "Perhaps I may find better ones—this does not show his face—but I will have this now. It may be a long time before I see him."

But she sat with the embroidery scissors in her hand, nevertheless, without cutting the reprint. Lestrangle would return to the factory, she never doubted, and all would continue as before, except that she must not see him. He would understand that it was not possible for anything else to happen, at least for many years. Perhaps, after Dick was married—

The green and gold beauty of the morning hurt her with the memory of that other sunny morning, when he had so easily taken from her the task she hated and strove to bear. And he had succeeded, how he had succeeded! Who else in the world could have so transformed Dick? Leaning on the table, her round chin in her palm as she gazed down at the paper in her lap, her fancy slipped back to that night on the Long Island road, when she had first seen his serene genius for setting all things right. How like him that elimination of Dick, instead of a romantic and impracticable attempt to escort her himself.

A bush crackled stiffly at some one's passage; a shadow fell across her. "Caught!" laughed Lestrangle's glad, exultant voice. "Since you look at the portrait, how shall the original dare to present himself? See, I am caught." He held out a card burned at the corners and streaked with red. "The first time I saw your writing, and found my own name there."

Amazed, Emily sat up, and met in his glowing face all incarnate joy of life and youth.

"Oh!" she gasped piteously. "You are surprised that I am here? My dear, my dear, after last night did you think I could be anywhere else?"

"The race—"

"I know that track too well to need much practice, and I had the machine out at dawn. My partner is busy practicing this morning, and I'll be back in a couple of hours. I was afraid," the gray eyes were so gentle in their brilliancy, "I was afraid you might worry, Emily."

Serenely he assumed possession of her, and the assumption was very sweet. He had not touched her, yet Emily had the sensation of brutally thrusting him away when she spoke. "How could I do anything else," she asked with desolation, "since we must never meet each other any more? Only, you will not go far away—you will stay where I can sometimes see you as we pass? I—I think I could not bear it to have you go away."

"Emily!" The scissors clinked sharply to the floor as she held out her white hands in deprecation of his cry; the tears rushed to her eyes.
